REPORT

The workshop provided students with hands-on experience in crafting delicious chocolates, fostering creativity and skill development. Participants were guided by experienced instructors who demonstrated various chocolate-making techniques, including tempering, moulding, and decorating. The interactive session also offered insights into the science behind chocolate making, aligning with the department's academic focus.

The event was a great success, leaving participants delighted with their self-made chocolates and enriched with new culinary knowledge. Such workshops continue to promote holistic learning and recreational engagement among students.
