REPORT

The Department of Botany organized a National Level Workshop on Aquatic Ecology Field Studies and Use of Test Kits on 19th and 20th January 2024. The workshop provided students with hands-on experience and theoretical insights into aquatic ecology.

The objectives of the workshop were to introduce participants to the principles of aquatic ecosystem studies, train them in fieldwork techniques, and develop their practical skills in using test kits for water quality assessment. The event also aimed to raise awareness about the importance of conserving aquatic ecosystems and inspire students to pursue ecological research.

The workshop successfully achieved its goals, with participants gaining essential skills in water analysis and fieldwork. They enhanced their scientific literacy and developed a deeper understanding of ecological dynamics. The hands-on training prepared students for research projects and further studies in ecology and environmental sciences.

The event was well-received by all participants, who appreciated the practical approach and relevance of the workshop.
