Industry Person's suggestions

- Basic knowledge of cloud computing in AWS/ GCP/ Azure. Also programming tests should be conducted on online platforms like Hackerrank and Leetcode. Add pyspark programming and understanding of parallel computing as subjects.
- Most of the companies actually use Python instead of R, so rather than doing Regression analysis using R it will be more beneficial to do it in Python.
- More case studies should be included rather than Theory.
- R, python and Advanced SQL.
- Data Science and Business Excellence.
- There's a need to include a lot of soft skill courses . As per my observation , students know what R test is or what is the definition of Bayes theorem , But they do not understand the practical implications of that. This is where we lose out when we go for job opportunities.
- Starting Sem 4 or from sem 5 start a meticulous course of R and Python and give them proper guidance relating these two softwares and how to solve problems using them , starting from the absolute basics.
- Encourage them to go on sites like kaggle and take datasets and apply their knowledge of statistics and coding on them
- More foundation of Mathematics can maybe be added in 1st year for students to be able to understand derivations better.
- Practical examples are needed.
- More efforts on application of statistics.
- Some practical examples would help them getting actual understanding of Business needs and applied solutions
- Could open a Bsc actuarial sciences course with an exemption format. Students will benefit from it.

Alumni Suggestions

- Visualization tools like Tableau or Power BI can be introduced.
- Python projects should be done in the final semester that will enhance the performance of students and their skills. In the current industry that is required most for starting a career in data science.
- Can introduce MS-Office courses for students .
- Can introduce Business case studies.
- We should introduce Some exploratory techniques in graduation. Also we should focus more on project work or software work in graduation as well.
- Data Science and Business Excellence. This will help understand business applications of concepts that we learn.
- Soft skills! Students know the ideas but are unable to communicate at times. Lack of confidence is a bigger threat than a lack of knowledge. A statistics student with good hold on R or Python programming will be a catch in the analytics industry.
- A Bsc Actuarial sciences course in the RJ college with a tie up with the IAI and exemptions!
- We can have sessions with Ex-student who are now working in a statistical environment. This will help them understand how any business works and how we apply statistics to it. Also will help students prepare for jobs.
