REPORT

Dr. Rachana Acharya, Assistant Professor, Department of Biotechnology introduced Dr. Sanjay Mehendale. He started his session by introducing about the emerging infectious diseases effecting humans are through animals which include domestic animals. He spoke about how microbes adapt easily and become resistant to various antibiotics. There should be a survey to explore public infrastructure so that we are prepared for any epidemic which can occur. He gave examples of dengue and how it can be prevented and controlled. He also touched upon the WHO guidelines for epidemic diseases. He spoke about the need for research in developing vaccines and drugs for curbing these emerging infectious diseases. He spoke about the role of YCMR and research agencies in handling diseases. The Covid-19 has put everyone into fast-track research mode as epidemic is evolving scientists are also evolving. The question answers were very interesting. The session ended with a vote of thanks to the speaker.
